Beacon Park Yard. The Framingham/Worcester Commuter Rail line is slated to get a new stop in 2020.

Transit officials working with Harvard University are hoping to turn an old Allston freight yard into the site of a $25 million Commuter Rail station that will provide a much-needed transit connection to South Station and the Back Bay.

The proposed station, tentatively named West Station, would be built at Beacon Park Yard on the Framingham/Worcester Commuter Rail line, officials recently announced. The station would link Allston with North and South stations and possibly Kendall Square.

The hefty price tag will be paid for by a combination of public and private funding, with Harvard University taking on a third of the cost.

"The fact that the station is becoming more real and more tangible is something I've gotten a lot of great feedback on from the Harvard community," said Kevin Casey of Harvard's public affairs office.

The station will be part of MassDOT's $260 million I-90 Interchange Improvement Project, which will straighten out the Massachusetts Turnpike in Allston, improve bicycle and pedestrian connections along Cambridge Street and incorporate all electronic tolling

Visit Metro.us for info on other MBTA projects, like the new Gov't Center station.

It's too early for MassDOT to release any details about the station, as developers are still working on its layout.

"People have asked for a new station for a long time, and we've been able to figure out a way to make it happen" said Kelly Smith of MassDOT. "It's a total re-imagining of this area. It's a pretty big change."

One possible outcome of the new station will be relief for the overcrowded Green Line.

"It's hard at this point to fully predict what the ridership will be and where it will come from, but this will add another transportation option for people in an area where it's limited," said Smith.

Work is expected to begin in 2017, with completion in 2020.

Harvard. Apology arrives after email death threats

The user of an email address that sent death threats to hundreds of Harvard University students and its affiliates has apologized and blamed the whole situation on his or her younger brother, the school has confirmed.

On Friday, the death threats, which are alleged to include racial slurs targeting people of Asian descent, was blasted out to hundreds, prompting Harvard to issue a community advisory on Friday and beef up police presence on campus over the weekend. The campus remained open.

The situation became more strange on Saturday. Harvard confirmed a second email was sent from the same account to the same recipients apologizing for the previous message, which the user said was sent by his or her younger brother. The initial message, the user indicated, should not have been taken seriously.

Saturday's email, according to The Harvard Crimson, was sent from someone claiming to be 15 years old and a resident of France.

An initial investigation indicated the email originated from overseas and therefore the threats "may not be credible," according to Harvard authorities. An investigation is ongoing.

Harvard is encouraging anyone who has pertinent information to contact university police at 617-495-1212.

Racing

Is this the end for Suffolk Downs?

Suffolk Downs, the historic racetrack that straddles Revere and East Boston, celebrated its final day of live horse races on Saturday.

After 79 years, the management of New England's last remaining thoroughbred track, has indicated the operation, in its current form, is not financially viable. The Gaming Commission's decision to not grant the track a casino license has been described as a death blow to the operation.

However, in recent days, The New England Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association filed an application with state authorities that would allow them to host live horse racing at the track. METRO

Mass. Ebola doc back in hospital

Dr. Rick Sacra, the Holden physician who contracted the Ebola virus while doing missionary work in Liberia, hospitalized with pneumonia-like symptoms.

He is being treated at UMass Memorial Medical Center in Worcester and is being monitored in isolation.

Experts, however, say the likelihood of a relapse of Ebola is highly unlikely.

Last month, Sacra became the third American aid worker to be successfully treated for the disease, which has killed more than 3,400 people during this outbreak in west Africa.

Sacra's hospitalization comes days after a Providence-based video journalist contracted the disease in Liberia. METRO

SHOULD YOU BUY OR LEASE YOUR CAR?

I'm thinking of getting a new car, but my friend said she got a really good deal on leasing a car. Are there any benefits to leasing over buying?

Whether you're looking to buy or lease a car, it is important to keep in mind that there is no universal "best answer." It depends on your personal financial circumstances and transportation needs.

The most obvious difference between leasing and buying is that consumers can make a smaller down payment if they are leasing because they aren't buying the car outright. Leasing also allows the consumer to avoid taking out a loan to cover the car's full value.

Another benefit to leasing a car is that you don't have to worry about the future market value of the car because you will simply return the vehicle after three years, at most.

Also, the overall mileage a consumer puts on a car can be a factor. If you drive over 100,000 miles a year, leasing may be preferable to buying because of the depreciation associated with high mileage as well as the consumers' need for dependable transportation.

On the other hand, buying a car is the preferred method for most people for good reason. Consumers can keep the purchased car for a long time, and this can be much more cost-effective in the long run.

Remember, whether you're leasing or buying, be sure to look for the bright-yellow Lemon Law sticker that informs you of your warranty rights should something go wrong with the car.

I have two friends who have been called by scammers pretending to be from the IRS. How can I tell the difference between a scammer and an actual IRS agent?

Our Consumer Hotline has recently received a lot of complaints about this scam.

Typically, the consumer receives a call from someone claiming to represent the IRS, who threatens legal action unless the consumer pays "the amount owed."

One trademark of this scam is that the scammer usually demands the money be paid to them in an untraceable way, through a prepaid card or a wire transfer. The IRS will never ask for money this way, and will not use threats to collect the debt.

Also, ask for notification in writing. Legitimate debts should always be documented in writing, but scammers will likely not do this because it creates a paper trail.

Dallas Ebola patient 'fighting for his life,' says head of the CDC

The first person to develop Ebola in the United States was struggling to survive at a Dallas hospital on Sunday after his condition worsened to critical, the director of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said.

Thomas Eric Duncan became ill after arriving in the Texas city from Liberia two weeks ago — heightening concerns that the worst Ebola epidemic on record could spread from West Africa, where it began in March. It has killed more than 3,400 people.

"The man in Dallas, who is fighting for his life, is the only patient to develop Ebola in the United States," CDC director Dr. Thomas Frieden said on CNN's "State of the Union."

In a media briefing with reporters on Sunday, Frieden said he was scheduled to brief President Barack Obama on Monday.

He said doses of the experimental medicine ZMapp were "all gone" and the drug is "not going to be available anytime soon."

A second experimental drug can be "difficult to use and can actually make someone sicker," he said. REUTERS

NJ boy's death is first linked directly to enterovirus

A New Jersey boy who went to bed last month in seemingly good health and died in his sleep is the first fatality linked directly to a strain of enterovirus that has infected more than 500 people, CNN reported, citing a local medical official.

The 4-year-old boy, identified by ABC News as Eli Waller of Hamilton Township, about 20 miles west of Atlantic City, never awoke after going to sleep on the night of Sept. 24, Hamilton Township Health Officer Jeff Plunkett said, according to CNN.

Waller's cause of death was determined to be enterovirus-68 (EV-68), CNN reported, citing Plunkett.

The Mercer County Medical Examiner's office did not immediately return messages seeking comment. REUTERS

Leave Prince George alone (for now, at least)

1

If anyone can successfully take on the paparazzi — or, in this case, one individual paparazzo — it's Prince William. His Kensington Palace office issued a royal statement that William and Duchess Kate have "taken legal steps to ask that an individual ceases harassing and following both Prince George and his nanny as they go about their ordinary daily lives." William and wife Kate "understand the particular public role that Prince George will one day inherit, but while he is young he must be permitted to lead as ordinary a life as possible." That seems reasonable enough, but that "as ordinary a life as possible" bit has got to be on a pretty impressive sliding scale when you're talking about a member of the British royal family. Still — points for effort.

Prince George is pictured here with his mum (we're obligated to spell it that way when writing about Brits). He seems to just be doing what any normal person would do, crawling around the polo grounds. / MAX MUMBY, INDIGO

Lohan 'out of her league' in London?

3

Lindsay Lohan's London stage debut has officially opened, but the critical response has not improved. Mark Shenton, writing for The Stage, says Lohan is "clearly out of her league and embarrassing onstage, still calling for prompts," while Quentin Letts of the Mail Online calls her turn in David Mamet's "Speed-the-Plow" a "travesty of art" and criticized the show's producers because they "sold their art for a potage of notoriety." Even the positive reviews feel like backhanded compliments: Michael Billington's Guardian review praises Lohan for a "perfectly creditable performance." Ouch.

Zoe Saldana says 'Star Trek' outfits went too far 'Into Darkness'

We don't always stop to think about the indignities some actresses suffer for the sake of entertainment. Zoe Saldana admits that her "Star Trek" uniforms often boldly go a bit too far up the thigh. "I just remember always being exposed, no matter how hard I would try," Saldana says, according to E! News. "I would tell [costume designer] Michael [Kaplan] that we had to work on this and [he would say], 'But it looks so cute.'" It's tough to argue with that. So how did Saldana know that the skirts might be a little too revealing? Her helpful co-stars. "I kept being reminded by all my male cast members that I was flashing," she says. I would sit down and it'd be like, 'Oh, Zoe, cross your legs.' And I would say, 'They are crossed.' 'Well, then put something over that because I'm just seeing everything.'"

Zoe Saldana is likely to live long, prosper — and flash her cast mates.

Sandler goes straight to streaming

4

Adam Sandler is going instant. The "Jack and Jill" star is set to produce and star in four films premiering exclusively on Netflix, bypassing a theatrical run, Netflix announced. "When these fine people came to me with an offer to make four movies for them, I immediately said yes for one reason and one reason only: Netflix rhymes with 'wet chicks,'" Sandler said in a statement. "Let the streaming begin!"

Another 'Iron Man'? Only if Mel Gibson directs

You want more "Iron Man" movies starring Robert Downey Jr.? Well, he's got some very specific demands. While the "Avengers" star has previously said a fourth "Iron Man" standalone film was out of the question, he agrees with Deadline's idea that he'd do it if Mel Gibson directs. "Why not? That movie would be bananas," Downey says. "He is so gifted as a storyteller and a director, I don't know that he requires some sort of mass forgiveness."

The big-screen breakthrough: Carrie Coon

Tony-nominated actress Carrie Coon plays Margo, Ben Affleck's sister, in "Gone Girl." / MERRICK MORTON

CARRIE COON
GETTY IMAGES

Introductions. The Tony-nominated actress made her feature film debut as Ben Affleck's sister in "Gone Girl."

Where you've seen her

Onstage in plays such as "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" in which she played Honey opposite her husband, actor/playwright Tracy Letts. She's also Nora on "The Leftovers."

Where she is now

Playing Margo, sister of Ben Affleck's Nick, in her first feature-length film, "Gone Girl," directed by David Fincher and based on Gillian Flynn's best-seller.

How she first came across the novel

"My husband and I were doing 'Virginia Woolf' on Broadway and he picked it up. We always bring books with us. He read it in a few days and said, 'I think that you should read this book.' He kept asking me questions and we had some great conversations about the dynamics and the psychology. There is a lot of psychology going on. I think that Gillian articulated something about women that nobody really put their finger on."

The irony

The feminism of 'Gone Girl'

"At the premiere [at the New York Film Festival] we started getting ready three hours before. We have hair and makeup people coming in. Then we're going to this premiere and talking about what it is to be women in the world. We're playing the game while talking about this film."

Fincher's notorious habit for doing many, many takes

"I'd rather be doing 50 takes than sitting in a trailer. For my first film, I wanted as many chances as I could to get it right. At the end of the day, you're not going back to your room saying, 'Oh, I wish I had tried this.' Chances are you tried it. We did start a pool — like, 'I think this will be 27 or 28.' Every now and then you'd get a five or an eight."

His average number of takes

"I would say it's in the 20s."

Perfume Genius: Queen of pain

Mike Hadreas talks about "the ickiness" he sometimes feels about himself on www.metro.us . / LUKE GILFORD

Know your queen. Mike Hadreas was bullied in high school, but now he's "Too Bright" to let it happen to other kids. His solution: Give them a new anthem.

Not too far into "Too Bright," the latest album by Seattle-based artist Perfume Genius — aka Mike Hadreas — the singer poses a rhetorical question: "Don't you know your queen?" he spits, with a defiant immediacy not unlike that of, say, a merciless Marie Antoinette. It's crucial to understanding the inner workings of the man behind Perfume Genius.

"Throughout my life, I sort of hoped for and waited for reassurance that I'm all right the way that I am and that there's nothing wrong with me, and that didn't always go very well," Hadreas says. "A lot of times I got the opposite for feedback, and the song is me just missing all that and stopping that sort of voice in my head that believes what everybody's saying and just demanding respect."

Hadreas explains that he was bullied "fairly hard" while growing up, an experience that not only mangled his self-esteem but convinced him that his vilifiers were right. As a result, he says, he adopted and maintained a victim's outlook on the world until long after high school.

"You know, I wish I would've heard that song when I was 13," he says. "Here's something I could've really fully related to in that specific way, and I could've puffed my chest up a little earlier."

'Horse shavings'

Off-putting and cute

The conversation gets off to a fuzzy start. When Hadreas answers the phone, we ask where he is. He says he's at the Washington State Fair. He isn't performing there, as we had originally thought (hoped). He's visiting.

"Right now I'm sitting next to a sign that says 'Horse Shavings.' Just the quietest spot I could find," he says.

Toward the end of the interview, he says he has more to explore.

"There are some like really long-haired luxurious guinea pigs. And all their wayward fur," he muses, "I find that kind of off-putting, but they're cute."

FIGHTING AN INVISIBLE BATTLE

Unfortunately, it's difficult to pick just one topic to address during National Mental Illness Awareness Week, which began Sunday. So many recent tragic events have thrust mental illness into the spotlight: the suicide of Robin Williams, the Santa Barbara killing rampage and veterans struggling with post-traumatic stress.

And these are just the stories that made the headlines; there are far more going untold among the nearly one in five American adults who suffer from a mental illness, according to National Institutes of Health data. Many are fighting quiet, private battles — with disorders ranging from moderate depression and anxiety to schizophrenia — to avoid the stigma that persists despite efforts to debunk myths, change attitudes and reform policy.

Those who suffer include people of all ages, from every ethnic, racial and socio-economic background. But because the vast majority of them pose no risk to anyone other than themselves, their struggles aren't acknowledged. Without proper treatment, however, these people risk countless small, personal tragedies such as losing their job, identity and relationships.

While some are under professional medical care, about 60 percent of adults and almost half of young people between the ages of 8 and 15 with a mental illness received no mental health services in the previous year, either because of shame, not knowing where to go for help or a distrust of mental health professionals. In extreme cases, they may not even know they're sick.

But no one has to suffer alone. Here are resources that can help.

Robin Williams' suicide showed how mental illness can affect even a seemingly happy person. / CBS

By the numbers

- About 43.7 million U.S. adults (18.6 percent) suffer from a mental illness.
- The rate of adults with mental illness was highest among those aged 26 to 49 (21.2 percent), followed by adults 18 to 25 (19.6 percent), then by those 50 or older (15.8 percent).
- An estimated 9 million adults (3.9 percent) had serious thoughts of suicide within the last year.

Though "How to Build a Girl" is a novel, Caitlin Moran's childhood heavily influenced Johanna Morrigan's story. / GETTY IMAGES

Caitlin Moran. The British author wants women to have fun again

Caitlin Moran's protagonist in her new novel, "How to Build a Girl," is a work in progress. But she doesn't need anyone's help — especially when it comes to sex.

Johanna Morrigan's gluttonous embrace of the world extends to her libido, something not commonly addressed in books about 14-year-old girls, and not because that impulse isn't there.

And it certainly didn't wait to be awoken by a man, a criticism Moran has leveled at many of the current entries in the YA genre.

At the U.S. launch of "How to Build a Girl," Moran discussed what's wrong with sex for women (of any age) and modern female protagonists.

Another kind of teenage girl: "I wanted to write about a horny teenage girl I don't see often in popular culture, [to] reclaim the word 'slut,' basically."

What's missing by omitting women's perspective: "In this book [the first in a trilogy], Johanna doesn't feel confident enough to let a man give her pleasure. She's never seen a man making a woman come, so she doesn't even know where that would happen in the sex."

On 'Fifty Shades': "I know a lot of people who are in the BDSM community, there are reasons why you're into that sex and why it satisfies you, why that's what you need. But [Anastasia Steele] clearly doesn't have the psychological makeup or background."

When things go wrong, maintain perspective: "To write a fairly funny, accessible book about the realities of having sex as a teenage girl, you have to realize early on that life divides into two kinds of experiences: The first one is awesome experiences, and the second one is terrible experiences that will later make amazing anecdotes."

The sex you have should be your own

"Girls feel that if you've said 'yes' at some point to sex, then you have to see it through, it's almost like you've done some kind of contract. The two most powerful words you'll learn as a girl are yes — and no."

Visit Metro.us for Caitlin Moran's answer to "I'm not a feminist."

The male gaze

How porn warps women's view of sex

"If you're a woman, very often, you're not kinda going, 'I'm having sex,' you're thinking what he's thinking. You're going, 'Wow, I must look really good doing this; he must be really enjoying that.' And that's because female sexuality has been mediated through the male gaze. Because of pornography, women are lying there being a porn director in their head, never thinking about what they want to do next. That's why [Johanna] starts off with a wank — the first thing she does, you realize that she is in touch with her own sexuality; she knows how to please herself."

Creating a support system for women of color in tech

Focus Fellow Zulna Hersicar consults with mentor Ellen Hunt. / PROVIDED

Entrepreneurship. Developing a path to success is key.

When Kathryn Finney founded digitalundivided — an organization devoted to engaging minority communities with the tech world — she didn't know quite what to expect. It was 2012 and it didn't seem like there were a lot of resources available to African-American women in the field.

"We had no idea who was going to come," says Finney of digitalundivided's first FOCUS100 conference, held almost two years ago. "No one had done a conference about black women in tech before."

Finney began her own site, The Budget Fashionista, during the early days of the fashion blogosphere in 2003. The experience helped her see firsthand the challenges that many black female entrepreneurs in tech face.

"I was the only black person at one conference and one of three women," she says. "I remember just how marginalized we were. Everyone just kind of ignored me."

In the years since then, Finney says she's thought a lot about how other women and people of color can be given opportunities to break into the often insular world of tech.

We asked Finney to share some of these lessons with us.

Don't try to be the official spokesperson: As many tech companies have gone through some soul searching about diversity in recent months, there have also been some high-profile comments from some techies decrying the need to recruit from underserved communities. "For the most part I don't engage [with those people]," says Finney. "I don't look at that as my job. Our responsibility isn't to diversify tech. Our goal is to help black women get into the tech pipeline."

Create a path for others: To do that, Finney and digitalundivided are concentrating on helping women of color find opportunities that suit them. Part of the problem, she says, is that many people have a misguided idea of what working in the field means and are discouraged from pursuing a career in it before they even begin. "We have to show people the path and show what the end of the pipeline looks like," says Finney.

Give entrepreneurs the support they need: Digitalundivided also runs the FOCUS Fellows program, an eight-week course that guides selected entrepreneurs through the ins and outs of running a successful business, obtaining funding and more. Creating a strong support system for women in tech, says Finney, is key to success down the line.

"You're kind of like the mafia," she says of her group. "Once you're in, you don't leave."

Embrace your outsider status

"The best way to handle it is to embrace being the unicorn," says Finney of often being the only woman of color in a room of executives. "It's not your job or responsibility to give racial-sensitivity lessons. In fact, it distracts you from your ability to grow your business."

4 CAREER LESSONS FROM GEN Z

How do you learn how to establish a career in this new economy? Look no further than the current generation of young people — that is, those 20 and younger.

To uncover some interesting revelations about the newest generation, Gen Z, I partnered with the third-largest staffing organization in the United States, Randstad US, on a global study analyzing how Gen Z's views of the workplace compared to Gen Y's. Here are a few ways that Gen Z will make you rethink your career:

Gen Y (born between 1982-1993) can take tips from Gen Z (born between 1994-2010), which has new ways of defining careers. / FUSE

1 Being loyal to your company is a good thing. Gen Z has observed that job hopping can be detrimental to your career by watching Gen Y. If Gen Z sets out to become more loyal than Gen Y, they could be better positioned to climb the corporate ladder with haste.

2 Money isn't everything. The recession was a major wake-up call for Gen Y, and instead of pursuing meaningful work, they often have no choice but to go for the money. Gen Z, on the other hand, sees each job as an experience that can help them build a career they truly love.

3 Help each other out. Nearly half of the older generation surveyed say they associate Gen Z with being lazy, while the younger generation has a positive view of its older peers. The lesson from Gen Z is that instead of stereotyping others, try giving people a chance.

4 Have an entrepreneurial mindset. Gen Z sees entrepreneurship as a potential career path and an alternative to a corporate job. These days, building a successful career means being more self-sufficient and entrepreneurial than ever.

By the numbers

A majority of Gen Z sees Gen Y members as:

56%
Being open-minded

55%
Offering new ideas

Horoscope

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Plan to engage in low-key entertainment with friends or family. An informal gathering at home will be less expensive and greatly appreciated.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Be extra vigilant with your house, car and other belongings. If you are too distracted, you are liable to forget to lock the door or turn off the stove, with dangerous results.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You will be pleasantly surprised by the cooperation you get from people who can back your projects. Don't be afraid to sell your ideas.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. You will form a meaningful and prosperous relationship with someone you have been admiring for a while. Favorable outcomes are likely if you mix business and pleasure.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Investments will pay off. Scout around for real estate ventures or make purchases that will grow in value. A lot will be learned from a trip.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Children will figure prominently in your plans. This is a great time to initiate personal changes. A makeover, fitness program or exercise routine will add to your appearance and self-esteem.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Don't hesitate to take advantage of an opportunity that comes your way. Others will be glad to do favors for you, but make sure you know what's expected in return.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Keep a balance between your work duties and your domestic life. Clashes with a loved one are distressing, but co-workers will protest if you don't pull your weight.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. If you display your versatility and ability to perform a multitude of tasks with speed and efficiency, you will be noticed.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Look after your physical and mental health. Adequate rest, healthy food choices and plenty of recreational activities will help reduce stress, keep you in top shape and make you ready to take on the world.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. A current relationship problem must be dealt with carefully. Take a serious look at your associates, and determine whom you really want to work alongside or spend time with.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You'll experience trouble at home if you aren't open about your plans and intentions. Share your creative ideas first.

Everyone should educate themselves about breast cancer

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness month and is time to wear the color pink. The third Friday in October of each year is National Mammography Day, first proclaimed by President Clinton in 1993. On this day, or throughout the month, women are encouraged to make a mammography appointment. Some may wonder why a man is writing a letter about a woman's disease, but it is a disease that affects us all, where the ones we love are affected by this insidious disease. It could affect our mother, sister, wife, lover or life companion. When coupled with new treatment options, mammography screenings improve a woman's chance of survival. We all need to get involved and do what we can to help fight this disease, like donating money to the American Cancer Society and organizations that help women with this disease. A lot of these organizations can be found on the Internet and in our local newspapers.

Don't take chance on climate change

Re: "'Science" changes as much as climate' (Metro, Oct. 3-5) Yes, yes there has been a natural cycle of climate change — but this ain't it. This is caused by man! And we can do something about it. Also, I'll be the first to admit that I could be wrong. And if I am, we might've spent some money and cleaned some air and water that didn't need it. But, if they are wrong, it could be the end of our children and our children's children. Do you want to take that chance? I don't! ALONZO SPRIGGS, VIA EMAIL

What went right

A look at what went right in the Patriots' win over the Bengals Sunday night:

- Tom Brady went to his tight end duo of Rob Gronkowski and Tim Wright early and often. Both tight ends had 60 yards receiving by the half. Gronkowski finished with exactly 100 yards receiving on six catches and Wright had 85 yards receiving on five catches.
- A quick start fueled the Patriots win as they racked up 256 yards of offense in the first half compared to the Bengals' 121 yards.
- The Patriots running game was alive and well as Stevan Ridley rushed for 113 yards and a touchdown on 27 carries. Shane Vereen had 90 yards on the ground on nine carries.

Pats quiet critics, slam the Bengals

NFL. The Patriots dominated Cincy Sunday night, 43-17, and are now 3-2 on the season.

Tim Wright's 17-yard touchdown grab in the first quarter put the Patriots up 14-0 Sunday night. / GETTY IMAGES

In less than a week, the Patriots went from owning the status of a "down, out and possibly dead dynasty" right back to the status of an "elite" AFC contender. Meanwhile, the Bengals' status as the lone undefeated team in the NFL lasted just over three and a half hours.

One of the more emotionally charged Patriots (3-2) teams in the Bill Belichick/Tom Brady era shredded the Bengals, 43-17, Sunday night at Gillette Stadium, just six nights after being blown out themselves by the Kansas City Chiefs.

Brady's first pass of the night was a 20-yard bullet to Brandon LaFell and the Pats quarterback actually ran it for six yards four plays later, firing up the typically murmuring Gillette Stadium crowd and giving the Pats instant momentum against one of the top defenses in the league. Stevan Ridley capped an efficient opening drive for the Pats with a 1-yard touchdown run. The Pats went up 14-0 on their next offensive series as Brady connected with Tim Wright for a 17-yard score.

The Pats held a 20-3 lead at halftime, but Cincinnati cut the lead to 10 early in the third quarter when Andy Dalton connected with Mohamed Sanu for a 37-yard touchdown. But New England responded immediately thanks to some shifty running by Shane Vereen. Vereen had 14- and 19-yard runs to set up a Brady touchdown pass to Rob Gronkowski from 16 yards out.

Much of the credit for the Pats' defensive dominance can be given to cornerback Darrelle Revis, who blanketed star receiver A.J. Green. Green was held to just two catches for 19 yards in the first half.

By the numbers

Tom Brady connected on 23-of-35 passing attempts Sunday and finished with 292 yards and two touchdowns. In the win, Brady became just the sixth quarterback in NFL history to throw for over 50,000 yards in his career.

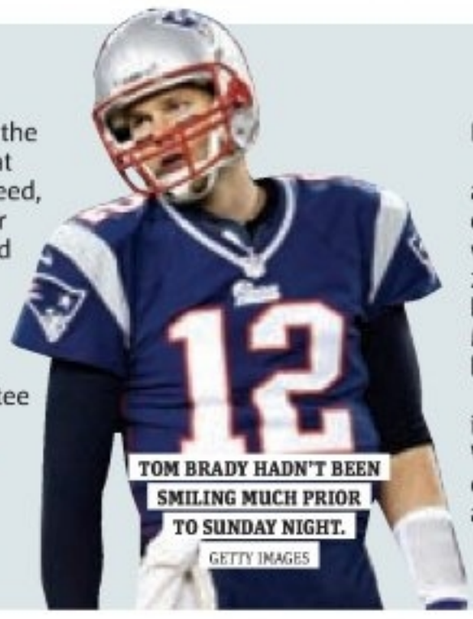
NFL

Report: 'Tension' exists between Brady and Patriots

Tom Brady is not happy with the Patriots and their personnel moves, and the Patriots are dubious as to whether or not the 37-year-old quarterback is still an elite performer, according to an ESPN report that was published Sunday afternoon, ahead of the Pats' Sunday night game against Cincinnati.

The report says "tension exists" between Brady and the Pats' coaching staff and that Jimmy Garoppolo was, indeed, drafted as Brady's successor at quarterback. Sources told ESPN that the transition from Brady to Garoppolo could happen "sooner than later," but that doesn't necessarily guarantee a change this season.

With Brady wanting to play several more years, the report states that it's no guarantee that No. 12 finishes his career in New England.



TOM BRADY HADN'T BEEN SMILING MUCH PRIOR TO SUNDAY NIGHT. GETTY IMAGES

Brady was visibly distraught at a postgame press conference after a 30-7 blowout win over the Vikings in Week 2. And after the Pats were blown out by Kansas City last Monday night, Brady chided his offense.

"This hasn't been an isolated incident," Brady told WEEI last week. "I don't think, offensively, we've played well all year. I don't think we've played well for a long time."

Around the NFL

- Saints 37, Buccaneers 31
Tampa Bay (1-4) nearly buried New Orleans (2-3) on Sunday as it held an 11-point lead early in the fourth quarter, but a Pierre Thomas touchdown run, a sack for a safety by Junior Galette and a Shayne Graham 44-yard field goal forced overtime. Khiry Robinson won it for the Saints in the extra session, breaking a touchdown run for 18 yards.

- Bills 17, Lions 14
Bills (3-2) defensive coordinator Jim Schwartz earned a measure of revenge in Detroit (3-2) as the former Lions head coach got his new defense to sack Matthew Stafford six times. Kyle Orton performed well in his first start as quarterback of the Bills, hitting on 30-of-43 passes for 308 yards while throwing a touchdown and an interception.

- Giants 30, Falcons 20
Giants rookie wide receiver Odell Beckham Jr. caught a 15-yard touchdown pass from Eli Manning with 10:02 left in the fourth quarter to put New York (3-2) ahead, 24-20, and the home team would hold off Atlanta (2-3) the rest of the way. Beckham Jr. caught four balls for 44 yards in his NFL debut. Manning once again looked comfortable running the offense, hitting on 19-of-30 pass attempts for 200 yards, a pair of touchdowns and zero interceptions.

Khiry Robinson found the end zone in overtime to win it for New Orleans on Sunday. / GETTY IMAGES

- Colts 20, Ravens 13
The Colts (3-2) won their third straight game thanks, in large part, to another stellar effort by Andrew Luck and some strong defensive play. Luck threw for 312 yards with a touchdown and two interceptions, but it was his running ability that led to Indy's final score of the day. Luck had a highlight reel, 13-yard touchdown scamper with 8:56 left in the fourth, giving the Colts enough points to hold off the Ravens (3-2).

- Panthers 31, Bears
The Panthers (3-2) defense came up big at home against the Bears (2-3), forcing four turnovers, as Carolina came from behind to beat Chicago. Greg Olsen had pair of touchdown receptions. METRO
